Horace's face went a very bright red,
and steam shot out from his nose.

His body shook as the anger set in
from his head to the tips of his toes.

The hippo snorted, bellowed and cried.
The zoo animals fled to their pens.
At times like this Horace cared not about Mr Gates, or his friends.

This was a paddy, an outburst, a strop!
This was an angry display.

Horace could stomp with the heaviest feet
and keep up his bad mood all day.

"I want my food and I want it now!"
ranted the hippo with force,

"Exercise? Pah!" Horace exclaimed,
"Just bring me some chips with some sauce."
